The SEER*Stat statistical software provides a convenient, intuitive mechanism for the analysis of SEER and other cancer-related databases. It is a powerful PC tool to view individual cancer records and to produce statistics for studying the impact of cancer on a population. To use SEER*Stat with the SEER Research Data, you must have access to the data before using the software.

SEER now has two data products available: SEER Research and SEER Research Plus. The Research Plus databases require a more rigorous process for access that includes user authentication through an Institutional account or a multiple-step request process for Non-institutional users. The two options to request access are described below.

If you submitted an agreement form for a previous data submission, it is not valid to access the current data. Also, if you change institutions, you must complete a new request for the current data. If you have questions, contact us.

For detailed steps, use the following links:

1. For Institutional Account Holders
   - Preferred method that provides direct access to the Research Plus Databases.
2. For Non-institutional Users
   - Used to access the more limited Research Databases; an additional application is required for Research Plus access.

- For Institutional users to access the Research Plus data
- For Non-institutional users to access the Research data or to upgrade access to Research Plus

For Institutional Account Holders

If you have an account affiliated with a research organization (examples include: eRA Commons login, and NIH or HHS accounts), complete these steps to access the Research Plus Databases. If you do not yet have an institutional account, refer to the FAQs or use the steps below for Non-institutional users.

Step 1: Apply for Research Plus Data Access

Request Database Access

To request access to the SEER Incidence Databases, you will need to create a new SEER*Stat account by registering. For immediate access to the SEER Research Plus Databases, you will need to register with your eRA Commons credentials using the Institutional Account Login. If you do not have an eRA commons login and are not affiliated with an Institute, you will need to use the Non-Institutional Account, and will receive access to the SEER Research Database.

If you are affiliated with an Institute and have an institutional email account (.edu, .gov, .org), you must use your eRA Commons credentials to request the SEER data.

Existing SEER*Stat account holders can upgrade access to the Research Plus Databases by logging in with your SEER*Stat Username and registered email address.

Only users who have already used this system to request a new, non-institutional account can upgrade an existing account. All other users should follow steps to create a new account.

Thank you – your registration is complete.

You will recieve a confirmation email with more instructions momentarily.

Once the email address you have submitted has been verified you can login and complete the Data Access Request form.

What to expect when completing the data access request form:

- The electronic Data Access Request form requires a brief description of your intended use of the data (based on the type of data being requested). You will also be required to review and agree to the Data Use Agreement (DUA).
- You will also be required to review and agree to the Best Practices for Securing NCI-supported Registry Data.
- Once your access is approved, you will receive a username and password for accessing the data through SEER*Stat Software.

Note for continued or new data release access: Your access will be restricted on April 30th of each year in preparation for the release of updated data. You will need to re-apply for access to the updated database starting April 1st.

Introduction

This document is intended to provide guidance for those requesting access to National Cancer Institute (NCI)-designated data repositories. It provides an outline of the expectations for the management and responsible conduct for the secondary use of data managed by the NCI on local storage systems or in cloud computing systems. This document is intended to ensure that NCI's data distributed for secondary research purposes are kept secure and that only NCI approved users have access to this data.

The information contained in this document is targeted to those individuals who are:

Dear [redacted]

Thank you for your interest in the SEER Research Data. Your account has been created with access to the SEER Research Data. This will allow you to use the SEER*Stat software to access the data. You are now eligible to upgrade the 25674-Nov2019 account's access to Research Plus on https://service.cancer.gov/seer-data-access

You should have received your username in a prior communication. Please note that both the username and password are case sensitive.

Your temporary password is: [redacted]

You can change your password once you log into SEER*Stat from the 'Client Server User Information' option located under the Profile menu. If you do not have SEER*Stat software on your PC, download and install the current version of the SEER*Stat software from https://seer.cancer.gov/seerstat/. You must be connected to the Internet while using SEER*Stat.

Please note that this account will expire two weeks after a new submission of SEER data (1975-2018) is released on or about April 15, 2021. You will need to submit a new request to access any data at that time.

Database details are available on https://seer.cancer.gov/data-software/documentation/seerstat/
For questions, see the SEER Data Contacts on https://seer.cancer.gov/data/contacts.html
